Dear Crodox Hiring Team,

I am writing to apply for the Developer Advocate role. I have three years of professional experience across eight European companies, shipping production code and, just as often, being the person who explains that code to the people who have to rely on it, which is the mix your role is asking for.

At FlowSpace, a live workspace marketplace, I have been the point of contact between the internal team and an external delivery agency, and I collaborated with the developer team on documenting product logic so the whole team could work from the same picture. Day to day I shipped features end to end in TypeScript, Node.js and Laravel, so I am used to writing code that other engineers then have to read and build on.

At Urlink, as project manager and developer on a Next.js and Supabase platform, I translated client requirements into working automations and builds, and at UltraStrategy I built a CV-parsing pipeline with n8n and Eden AI, which meant explaining a technical pipeline to non-engineer stakeholders.

I am not yet a published technical writer or conference speaker, but I have repeatedly been the translator between code and the people relying on it, and I would treat building that function at Crodox from scratch as the actual job.

I hold Italian EU long-term resident status. I am not currently authorised to work in Germany and would need the applicable employer-side permit or sponsorship process; I am also glad to discuss a remote arrangement from Italy if that fits better. I am ready to relocate and complete whichever process applies.

I would welcome the opportunity to discuss how I could contribute to Crodox.

Regards,
