Dear Hiring Manager,

I am applying for the Commercial Product Owner position at EXIN. The opportunity to help shape products that validate digital skills is a strong match for my background at the intersection of product delivery, education-focused technology, commercial workflows, and hands-on implementation.

At FlowSpace, I owned product work from understanding user and business needs through implementation and iteration. I helped scale a live marketplace from 2,000 to more than 4,500 users, contributed to its migration to a coded Next.js and Laravel platform, and worked with internal colleagues, an external agency, customers, and operations to turn requirements into shipped improvements. I also built CRM and go-to-market automations for lead capture, enrichment, routing, and outbound activity, using feedback and operational data to improve the workflow. As a developer and project manager on Urlink, I translated client requirements into a working platform and coordinated delivery across product logic and automation.

EXIN's need for someone who can structure product briefs, define scope and priorities, collaborate with marketing and sales, and guide products through launch and iteration is especially appealing. I bring an entrepreneurial mindset, strong organization, clear communication, and practical experience turning ambiguous needs into usable products. My education includes a bachelor's degree in Philosophy, International Studies and Economics with a minor in Entrepreneurship, and my experience building tools for courses, internships, and jobs has kept me close to the education and skills space. I would be eager to learn the certification domain and contribute to EXIN's international growth.

I am based in Venice, Italy, hold an EU Long Term Residence Permit, and am available immediately. Thank you for considering my application.

Regards,

Prabhavit Gupta
